

ABSTRACT

Described is a process for generating cells producing pancreatic hormone by cultivating and differentiating stem cells obtained from differentiated exocrine glandular tissue of an organism. The use of the cells producing pancreatic hormone is also described.